There probably never was a time when appear to be now. Whether they may be the ready for bearing on Friday next, Wednesday grand demonstrations or the wary feelers of Trade Unionism, they seem to be as common as railway travelling and about as cheap. For every real or imaginary grievance under strike, and having become as much habituated to this remedy as he is to Holloway's ointment and cold-drawn castor oil, he equally rushes at it without professional advice, -whenever he or his affairs begin to look a little " seedy." Indeed, this respected British workman is becoming quite a valetudinarian in all that relates to his social health, a term which, it is needless to say; means for him simply personal comfort at his employer's expense. Strikes are the medicine for all his diseases, and whether looked upon as the prescriptions of that fussy doctor the Intera patient who is becoming daily more bilious, it connot be denied that they have become a settled institution, to be classed with Magna Charta and the Habeas Corpus by the future | dence. historian. All sorts of comical objects are sought by way of a strike, the latest development of the movement being a stout com- the piece of rope now in court which should bination amongst the domestic servants of be taken into consideration, as it was only Dundee for shorter hours, more holidays, more wages, and "the abolition of Sunday of $10; moreover, it prevented the holsting of

There are few that ever, sent to two months hard labour. have not some cheering reminiscence of that dreadful process of "giving warning" on the part of those whom their places "don't suit," and nothing is more natural on such occasions than the putting forward of a strong objection to Sunday work (even with a potatoeclause or other salvo) as the thing that MARY JANE "never was used to and can't put up Court lying down on the floor screaming, and with." But somehow these things look furny making a great noise. He was called in to see, as forming part of the business of a Strike Committee. However, there is the patent fact that no ill is too small for treatment on Mr. White what was the matter: asking had this great strike principle. The growing tendency to this policy of combination in all trades and services at home is not one of the The complainant was rolling and kicking dread- the results likely to follow from the admission of most encouraging signs of the times. They see scarcely any question in it, and appear to have decided long since that to interfere with combination would be unjustifiable. But if they saw what residents in China see every day of their lives, they might be inclined to re-open the question, Here, the principle of the Trade Union is unchecked, and the Trade Union bas long since developed into an association for the furtherance of its own objects, whatever they beneficial to anyone but its members, perhaps moccasionally, opposed to every idea of justice his interest. and humanity, and subversive of all law and order, it is to be feared generally. Each of such associations is a State in itself, ruled by none but its own laws, and constantly requiring of its members services which, if they considered themselves members of any Commonwealth outside their Society, they would not perform. That is the perfection of the system which as yet Great Britain is only practising. It might be as well if she could stop before she gets her hand in, but this could only be effected by repressive measures, remedied or might precipitate that evil Our point is that there is a dilemma, not that either horn is the preferable one. If it were fully recognised, a decision might be arrived at, but the evil is that men see no difficulty at all in the matter.

We notice with much pleasure that the honour of knighthood has been conferred upon Mr. D. B. Robertson, C.B., who has long belo the position of Her Majesty's Consulat Canton, and who is one of the oldest and most respecied public servents in China. The position of Consul at that port is one of much responsible lity on account of its proximity to Honekong. and the duties of the post, which are thus out of proportion to the comparatively small foreign trade at Canton itself, have always been carefully and efficiently performed. Mr. Robertson's career in the Foreign Office Service dates as far back as 1842, when he was employed it the Mixed Commission for the settlement of claims of the British Legion on the Portuguese Government. He was appointed Vice Consu at Shanghai in 1843, and remained there till 1850, when he took charge at Ningpo, but he returned to Shanghai in 1851, and it will be remembered his name appears in 1852 as. Vice-Consul under that of Sir Rutherford Alcock, Consul, on the foundation atome of the old Consulate. In 1853 he was first appointed Acting Consul at Canton. In 1854 he was left in charge of the Superintendency at Hongkong during the absence of Her Majesty's Pleuipe tentiary, and in 1855 again went to Shanghai. In 1858 he was tranferred to Canton, but detained in Shanghai for service, and in 1859 h again took charge of the Canton Consulate

THE INHERENT FALLACY OF BALLOT.

(To the Editor of the Pall Mall Gazette.) SIR.—Your Friday's article on the Government defeat on their stringent clause for secreey appears to me to have hit the nail on the head-simost for the first time. I do not know whether that defeat will be fatal to their Ballot Bill, and to any and every Ballot Bill, but I am sure it ought to be. Their insistance was utterly unreasonable, but underiably logical. It was logical because the absolute secrecy they aim at can never be secured unless it be made penal, and very soverely penal, for a man to display his vote, inasmuch as the oppressor who either intimidates or bribes will insist upon his victim's proving to him that he has voted as he ordered him to vote, so long as it is left possible for him to prove it. But, at the same time, their insistance was irrationtemper of the House), because it was monetrous to risk a defeat and to press what (to say the least) was an extravagant proposal, in order to prohibit the exhibition of a voting paper to tile eyes of six men, all sworn to secrecy; but still more because average Englishmen, common sense, and common justice alike revolt from the enormity of making it ponishable (by imprisonment) to do in 1872 what the law actually probibite from doing in 1871-of declaring criminal and penal in one year a practice which was our habit, our privilege, our ancestral boast the year before, and every preceding year since the Constitution was in being. I ventured some three years since to point out in your columns that the true and fatal objection to the Ballot was that, whether desirable or not, real secrecy as to how a man voted was simply not attainable. Ministers, and the friends of the Ballot generally, have now arowed their conversion to this view. They have declared that it is attainable only by a measure so despotic as to be simply intolerable. Secret voting was absolutely prohibited yester. day : open voting must be as absolutely be secured by such an outrage on our sense of by a party calling itself Liberal, or a Govern-

A SUPPOSED MURDER BROUGHT TO LIGHT. -A few days ago, at Cambridge, a skeleton was discovered in the cricket ground of Corpus Obristi College. Some trees are being planted and on removing the sod, the spade came upon surface. The skull has behind the left ear a fracture, the result, it is said, of a blow, add the bone of the nasal organ is also broken. The teeth on the lower jaw are perfect, and there are only a few teeth missing from the upper jaw. The position of the skull when found shows that the body was forced into the ground with the face downwards. A medical contleman has given it as his opinion that foul play must have been used. With the ekcleron was found a copper coin, dated 1771, but this by no means gives any cine as to the time the. skeleton has been deposited; it is thought but a gery few years:

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chi-

But the true secret of its impressiveness is the picture it reveals of the real interior disdain of a high and noble character for the selfish subterfuges of politicians less pure and less sincere. It was of the same species of eloquence, though a far higher and more impressive specimen of it, as that which the Quarterly reviewer adduces from amongst the happiest of Lord John Russell's retorts, his retort on Burdett, who had just ratted to the Tories:-"I quite agree with the honourable baronet that the cant of patriotism is a bad thing. But I can tell him a worse,—the re-cant of patriotism,-which I will gladly go along with him in reprobating whenever he shows me an example of it." It is remarkable enough that Mr. Bright's highest efforts of eloquence all suggest more analogies with the type of eloquence properly aristocratic than with that of our middle statesmen,-Canning, Peel, Gladstone. Not, of course, that the great aristocratic orators often betray that deep religious feeling and imagination which is so-specially characteristic of Mr. Bright,-but that they do know the art of presenting their own lofty self-respect and self-confidence, and their disdain of anything beneath it, as a sort of spectacle to their audience, after a manner which has only been rivalled among the orators of the people. but in him exceeded,—by Mr. Bright Lord John Russell's disdain of Burdett, though a tine expression of aristocratic scorn of disloyalty to political faith, had nothing in it of the almost royal grandeur of Mr. Bright's disdain, for the present Sir Robert Peel. It is worth notice that the only one our rising statesmen who has anything of the same art, and it is his only great force as a speaker, for he neither presomes nor pretends to any of the skill of a rhetorician, is Mr. Forster. He manages at times,—his speech of Tuesday night on Mr. Candlish's motion was a very good, sterling. The two valuations differ in other though not the best example, to carry very particulars.
